TILTED WOMAN'S

the best manufacture the members can imitate and in many instances improve upon the strokes of their masters; and a recreation room, where draughts and chess and other games dear to the heart of the Britisher can be played. All for the equivalent of two dollar bills and half a "cart wheel." Yet Ludy Hope declares that it will pay.

LUXURIES COME CHEAP.

Unstairs eighty bedrooms have been set apart for the use of the members of the Hope club. These range in price from $1.25 to $2 a week, and the price from $1.25 to $2 a week, and the peculiar planning of the building has made it possible for every room to be made it possible for every room to be an outside one. The rooms are small, to be sure, but they are scrupulously clean, provided with electric light and neat furnishings. On each floor are baths free to all, which is indeed a concession in England, where the privilege of a bath is always calculated as an "extra."

CLUB FOR CLERKS. so much for the Hope club; it has near and more pretentious neighbor, is called the Connaught club, and ing of Connaught House, a matter of a few days only. Yet already applications are pouring in so fast that there threatens to be a congestion of business in the secretary's office. The new organization is intended by Lady Hope to supply a big void in the life of bank clerks and young men in general in business in London and without homes. The membership fee is the same as in the case of the Hope club, but as a matter of fact the accommodations are much superior. The added income to pay for this extra luxury Lady Hope expects will be forthcoming from the slightly higher charge for sleeping accommodations and the very much larger membership of the club. One hundred and twenty sleeping rooms have been set apart for the use of members of the Connaught club, for which from $2 to $3 will be charged. At the disposal of the members of the Connaught club, and by the way, for the members of the Hope club as well, a magnificent concert hall has been provided. It is fitted with a large organ, and electric phonograph, a modern electrophone connecting with all the theaters of London and an electric cinematograph.

Now, while all these schemes are expected to pay for themselves. Lady cinematograph.

Now, while all these schemes are expected to pay for themselves, Lady Hope has not deposited all her eggs in one basket, so to speak. She has made provisions against a possible deficit. The ground floor of Connaught House has been built into a row of eight shops along the front. Six of these will be let to various tradespeople, but Lady Hope, who is nothing if not versatile, has reserved to her own use two of the choicest. One she now runs as a bonnet shop under the name of "Estelle," and therein may be purchased still another evidence of my lady's extremely active mind—the Hope Bandeau. Being a mere man I am out beyond my depths when I deal with such matters, but I will do my best to describe it. It is a steel hoop, open and overlapping at one point, covered with velvet and it sews into the crown of the hat just like any other bandeau. The ends are left free, however, and when the hat is put in place on the top of the head, or on the side, or front, or half down the back as the style of the moment may demand, the ends of the bandeau are extended and allowed to clasp tightly the mass of ends of the bandeau are extended and allowed to clasp tightly the mass of hair. This invention, which has been duly patented by Lady Hope, forbodes the death of all hat pins, says that titled lady. At any rate she knows more about it than I do and perhaps I haven't made it appear as epochmaking as it really is.

RATHER TALL CONTRACT.

The other of the stores which Lady Hope has reserved to herself has been opened as a photographic supply store, she being an enthusiastic amateur snap-shotter. From this shop she runs what is known as the Connaught General Entertainment Agency, which stands ready and willing to supply you with "every known form of entertainment on the shortest notice," which to say the least, is a tail contract and savors of one of "Tody" Hamilton's circus announcements. RATHER TALL CONTRACT.

While the Hope club and the Connaught club are philanthropic enterprises, the Hope laundry, the Hope restaurant, which is open to the public as well as to the members of the Contaurant, which is open to the public as well as to the members of the Connaught club, the Hope bonnet shop, the Hope photograpic studio and supply store and the Connaught General Entertainment Agency are not. They are all out for the Almighty Dollar with their noses to the ground following the scent as keenly as their nearest competitors. But the earnings will not find their way to the pockets of Lady Hope. Instead the profits will be applied by her in enlarging the work of the two clubs.

CARRIES NO FRILLS.

CARRIES NO FRILLS.

Personally, Lady Hope is a motherly sort of woman without any of the frills of the ordinary type of titled dames. As she conducted me over the great building and pointed out its features and advantages I had an opportunity of judging of the intense love and respect in which she is held by those she has beriended. As we entered the readingroom of the Hope club all the occupants of the comfortable chairs jumped to their feet with a cheery "Good morning, my lady." In several cases she asked kindly after members of the families of club members, who were known to her to be sick. As we passed into the quarters of the Connaught club practically the same thing took place.

GOOD ON DETAILS. GOOD ON DETAILS.

Although she has a manager for every department of her great undertaking she does not for a moment loose her intimate grasp of the smaller details. All the correspondence passes through her hands, and with the help of her private secretary she manages to keep in touch with every end of her many enterprises.

"I believe that the work I am doing, both through the Hope club and the Connaught club, is one that has long wanted doing." Lady Hope said to me in speaking of her schemes: "There are thousands of young men in London whose homes are far away in the country and who in living about the city are subjected to countless temptations. My clubs will provide temporary homes for them, will keep them out of the streets at night and out of the public houses. They are poor boys' clubs without the objectionable features of the ordinary organizations of that description."

the ordinary organizations of that description."
Lady Hope inherits her interest in practical philanthropy for she is the daughter of General Sir Arthur Cotton, K. C. S. L. who devised a system of irrigation by means of canals in southern India which, in seasons of drouth, kept famine at bay. She has married twice, her first husband was Admiral Sir James Hope, K. C. B., and her second Thomas Denny, whose identity has been completely lost sight of in that of his brilliant wife. But he does not mind a bit occuping a back seat in public estimation and is one of the warmest supporters of her philanthropic schemes.

In closing, I will narrate, as it was told to a friend by Jeanne Weber herself, an incident which throws a flood of light on the machinations which so nearly worked her ruin. DEATH OF HER BOY.

It is in connection with the death of her little boy. Two days before the child died, his mother, who had been out all the afternoon, went to fetch him from school. Little Marcel was trembling and in tears, When asked what was the matter, he re-plied that his father had beaten him. The child's body was black and blue from the thrashing it had received. Next day Marcel complained of in-Continued from page twelve.)
